

The present invention relates to protracted acting, water-soluble aggregates of derivatives of human insulin, derivatives of human insulin capable of forming such aggregates, pharmaceutical compositions containing them, and to the use of such aggregates in the treatment of diabetes.

The present invention relates to protracted acting, water-soluble aggregates of derivatives of human insulin, derivatives of human insulin capable of forming such aggregates, pharmaceutical compositions containing them, and to the use of such aggregates in the treatment of diabetes.